Reading time : Let's read about how to know if something is worthy buying

A good way to figure out if something is worth buying is to look at enjoyment, cost, and utility. Money is a tool that we are to use but we must use it wisely. Sometimes we can spend it and sometimes it's best to wait.

Carl Richards, a financial experts, says to consider three things to decide if something is a good buy:

Enjoyment

If you do not enjoy something, it's not good to buy it. If the choice is a cheap can of sardines or wild-caught Alaskan salmon, even if one is cheaper if you don't eat it, it was not a good buy.

Cost

Sometimes the most expensive things aren't the best buy. Something that is very valuable because you use it a lot or enjoy it a lot can be the best buy.

Utility

This is how much you use something. I bought a $5,000 road bike and this seemed crazy. After doing the math, I realized it was a good buy because of how long this bike lasts. I get a lot of use out of it.
